

Dimensional Energy Physics and the ‘Dimension of Life’

By Arthur Winarczyk, (Australia).
admin@5gldoctor.com or med5gl@gmail.com

No affiliation to a university or research group. Owns a registered business by the name of 5GL Software (Australia). A one person business. The main product is a medical diagnosis software for Windows. Author of self-published books in particular one titled ‘The Science of LIFE’. URL which describes the book is <https://5gldoctor.com/sciencelife.html>.

This article may be of interest to editors of publications that cater to special interests groups such as science, physics, medicine, psychiatry, religion?, psychology, psychics. You can publish this article in your publication.

Abstract

A new science can be difficult to be accepted. An understanding of dimensional energy (DE) has led to the ability of the author’s brain to form such energy that can interact with ‘alien’ life in the ‘Dimension of Life’. Not much and rare. Such aliens are a ‘consciousness’ which may or may not have some kind of ‘dimensional body’ (form). A medical analysis/diagnosis software was used extensively. (5GL-Doctor. URL is <https://5gldoctor.com/index.html>). It has a large brain dysfunction and thought disorders and case studies database. It matches patterns. This software was used to check whether the experiences with ‘alien’ life in the ‘Dimension of Life’ could be explained as more likely of clinical origin – or caused by the imagination. Only simple sense telepathy is possible with ‘alien’ life because such have no understanding of the ‘Dimension of Matter’ and of biological life – of our concepts and beliefs and our way of understanding. A number of overlapping situations led to the development of dimensional energy physics and an understanding of the ‘Dimension of Life’. Situation 1: an assumption that baffling phenomena among identical twins can be understood by defining a type of energy that is not constrained by spatial distance. The main studies were identical twins separated at birth and reunited later in life. From such, theorems of dimensional energy were inferred. From these the concept of ‘sense particles’. Situation 2: the author of this article has experienced what he refers to as ‘Life in the Spirit’. Over a span of 30 or so years. Nothing to do with religion. It is an experience of what ‘The Science of LIFE’ explains, and defines using dimensional energy physics, as the ‘Hebrew God dimension’. Relevant URL that explains is <https://5gldoctor.com/iamchapter1.html>. There was a need to understand ‘Life in the Spirit’ because the Holocaust had caused chaos in what ‘The Science of Life’ explains as ‘Jewish Life in the Spirit’. A search for a way to understand scientifically. Situation 3. The concept of ‘quantum entanglement’ appears to describe dimensional energy behavior. At first this was used to develop the sense particle theory, however, theoretical physicists will claim that some of their most outlandish ideas have been proven. An examination of proofs typically suggests the imagination or the observer effect or suspicious mathematics that depend on strings of integration and differentiation which can only yield approximate results.

Key Words

Dimension of Life, Dimension of Matter, dimensional energy, dimensions, Life in the Spirit, sense telepathy, sense particles, life particles, semi-dimensional DNA, sense, alien sense, Jewish Life in the Spirit, alien communication, mental telepathy

Discussion

‘Dimensional energy’ (DE) is a type of energy that is not constrained by spatial distance. It can, in theory, form naturally in any living organism. ‘The Science of LIFE’ also defines DNA as having a dimensional component that makes evolution possible. A characteristic of DE is to reconcile opposites, such as conflicting ideas or beliefs or understandings. The more compact, the quicker it can do this and can take into consideration more. When two sufficiently similar bundles of dimensional energy coexist, such combine to form a ‘dimensional space’ (DS). A suitable medium for mental telepathy and ‘Life in the Spirit’, which is a form of mental telepathy defined as ‘sense telepathy’. Scientists have proven mental telepathy. In addition, a DS can spark a consciousness. In which case it is defined as a ‘dimension’. A bundle of DE in John in the United States and a sufficiently similar bundle in Emma in Germany will automatically combine to form a DS. Across this medium a ‘sense’ flow is possible. While it can take years to adapt, the brain of John and Emma can adapt to equate the sense to word flows and male or female tones. (Assuming this happens regularly). Mental imagery is relatively easy to introduce into a DS. Perceived actions of a mental image is also relatively easily to introduce.

Understanding DE and how it behaves, is to understand ‘dimensions’ and the ‘Dimension of Life’ and, in theory, a new ‘path of evolution’. Besides the Hebrew God dimension, other dimensions have been identified. Presumably born from human thoughts. One was named Isabella and defined as the ‘Sicilian Mafia’ dimension. Another was named ‘Li’, defined as a Buddhist dimension. Another was named Andromeda. In a virtual reality like environment in a DS, Isabella can form an image of a 7-year-old girl – or, depending on how she ‘focuses’ her consciousness, a super attractive 19-year-old mental image. Li can form an image of say a 5-year-old girl. The actual mental images are the focus of their consciousness. The body itself is dimensional energy. Andromeda can’t form a mental image of self, but is an environment suitable to experience virtual reality like sequences called ‘settings’. Isabella can reproduce settings from times past. A novel titled ‘The Most Elusive Scent of All’ was the result of the dimension working with the author to portray an image of the Sicilian Mafia, especially of a time about 300 years ago when the dimension was born. Does Isabella actually connect, somehow, to any Sicilian nowadays? That is unlikely. It is a fun dimension in which you, if you are sensitive to this dimension, can imagine being a Mafiosi. The dimension makes an experience seem authentic. Li, the Buddhist dimension, appears to connect to about 7 Buddhists. Neither the Hebrew God dimension or Andromeda can form a mental image. That suggests both are ancient dimensions which evolved beyond the need of a mental image of self. These can produce an environment in which ‘beings’ (the mental images but such are a ‘consciousness’) can interact and design a ‘Promised Land’ or a ‘heaven’.

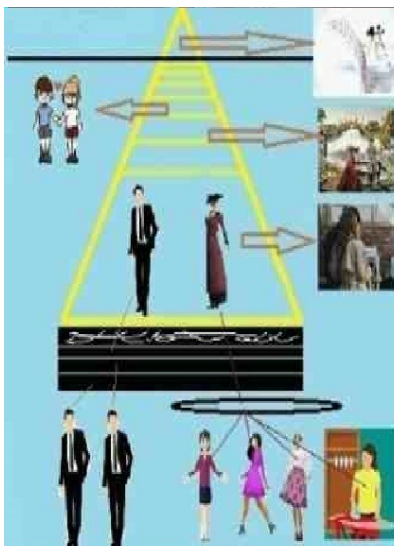

The ‘Dimension of Life’ is accessible from advanced ‘Life in the Spirit’. A DE formed by the human brain is not particularly ‘strong’. As it compacts more, the nature of its ‘physics’ properties and its ability to bridge a ‘chasm’ improves. A DE is likely to be able to form an infinite variations of its own self (each variation is an ‘energy state’). Each variation has the potential to interact with alien life in the ‘Dimension of Life’.

The dominant feature of a DE is that it is not restricted by spatial distances. An equally important characteristic is that it strives to reconcile opposites or conflicts. To better understand this, a mix of physics and human rules of evidence is best. Energy is an intuitive term. Energy strives to be at equilibrium. TRUTH can be considered an example of equilibrium. To form a binding decision a WILL has to form. A WILL can alter the brain’s neural networks hence thinking. That WILL has to work on both cerebral hemispheres. (The left and right brain). The typical left brain is the logical and details brain and only ‘thinks’ in two spatial dimensions – a 2D brain. The typical right brain is more an emotions and spatial perception brain – a 3D brain. Example. If you have a typical brain and your right brain switches off while you are heading to a car park to find your car, you will not be able to find your car. If it is your left brain that switches off, you will find the approximate location of your car but every car shape and color will look exactly the same and you will not see any difference in details such as numbers on the number plates.

A DE is likely to form in a brain when many factors need to be considered. A spiritual contemplation can be a trigger. Another can be to resolve challenges. Example: why do astronomers claim they receive signals from stars when according to the inverse square law of radiation (such as of radio waves) that is impossible – because the claimed distance of even the closest star is too far for any signal of sufficient strength to come near our solar system. So why the claim? ‘Fear of the unknown’ is one answer. This may not seem to be a scientific answer, but it is TRUTH according to a DE that worked on the problem. Why is the star Sirius claimed to be so far away while it is the brightest of all stars and the first to be seen at dusk? A DE that worked on this deduced that Sirius is the closest star to Earth, followed by Canopus. So why do astronomers claim their mathematics have identified Sirius as a star very far away? The answer from a DE “The mathematics used are not mathematics. To be valid mathematics for this purpose two precise and exact distances must be known. Impossible with stars.” Once you start inventing mathematics a domino effect begins. Any result is possible. Hence some stars, such as Methuselah, were claimed to be much older than the proposed age of the universe. Eventually the obvious contradiction resulted in many astronomers updating the theoretical age of the universe to twice the previous. Why do astrophysicists claim a blue star is hot to about 25,000 K? On Earth and fueled by oxygen a blue flame is the hottest – but why would this be true of a star? Form a DE in the brain that attempts to reconcile so many conflicting theories or beliefs interstellar astronomers have, and the answer comes out as “Interstellar astronomy is a belief system, a religion. It is not science.” Another reason a DE may form is to alter DNA in a species to give birth to an offspring with an improved skill. By ‘The Science of LIFE’ concepts DNA is semi-dimensional. Always has a dimensional component. That makes it relatively easy for a DE to bind with DNA and work out how to change every single one of the billions upon billions of bits of information in DNA to ensure an offspring evolves that is an improvement – but retains much of the functionality of the parent. Example. A chimp’s DNA is, depending on which research article you read, between 99.7 and 99.9999999% identical to human DNA. (Granted, this refers to the coding part of DNA. Only about 1% of DNA. The other parts, the non-coding components, remain a mystery.) Such a slight difference creates a different appearance and functionality. But having said this, a human being shares 60% of DNA with a banana. DNA similarities may not be that useful in the study of evolution. In ‘The Science of LIFE’ concepts DNA doesn’t evolve life – it creates life.

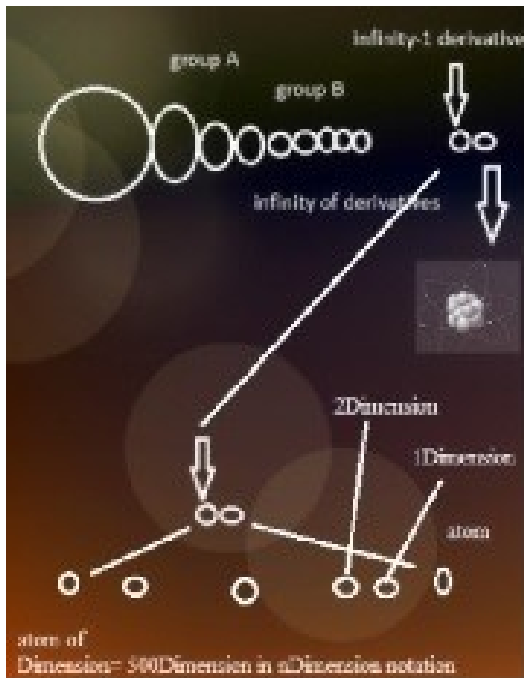

A DE forms in the brain when there is a need to reconcile a number of usually complicated differences in a neutral manner. It is highly individual. A DE in one person working on an issue may come up with a different result to a DE working on the same issue in another person. Other times when a DE may form is during the formation of the brain in an embryo. It is known that neural paths appear to stretch across to reach other parts, but there is no explanation for how the brain understands this has to be done. What takes place is inconsistent with what is known how the brain develops. Another time a DE might form rapidly is during a ‘fight or flight’ response. The speed of such a response can’t be explained by brain activity because the brain needs chemicals in junctions (synapses) to propagate currents (thoughts). A relatively slow process.

Dimension of Life

The image explains a principle. Dimensional energy that forms in person A may not be that dense, but it can combine with other sufficiently similar DE’s to form a more compact DE. At this point a consciousness forms within the dimensional energy. The same principle as medicine understands from studies of split-brain patients. Namely that each cerebral hemisphere of the human brain is a consciousness in its own right. Together, a higher ‘I AM’, a higher consciousness, forms. Thus from a number of human beings a virtual male and female can form within a dimensional space. Each is a consciousness. The two can interact just like in true life. Every single person party to this experience may think or feel or believe that he or she is the one in the experience. That is, the mental image of ‘Man’ and ‘Woman’ that form map onto biological people. Each may feel or think that he or she is the Man and Woman. However, in theory much of this is also at an unconscious level. That means some people to which a dimensional energy links are not directly aware.

The image explains how 'Life in the Spirit' works. The settings, the virtual reality effects, can be introduced into the dimensional space from human memories of places and events. As the dimensional energy compacts, it begins to climb higher, so to speak, into the 'Dimension of Life'. It begins to sense more and more into the 'Dimension of Life'. The human brain of the seeker will cooperate and try to form mental imagery of what it senses. Hence a Man and a Woman might see themselves walking up steps. The quality of such visions in the mind's eye, these virtual reality like sequences, can be perhaps 25% of true life imagery. That might not seem much but it is. Every person has their own comfort level. Some people would not be comfortable seeing at 25% in the mind's eye, and instead may see the mental imagery dimly.

Another aspect of understanding the 'Dimension of Life' is to gain a different insight into the creation of our universe. The 'Dimension of Life' is full of 'life particles'. Extremely compact (say dense) dimensional energy that are extremely curious and highly sensitive to changes. When say a bubble appears on a sea of nothing, a universe begins. Life particles flood this zone trying to work out what exactly is sensed. The only way in which life particles can finally work out what they sense, is by converting to atoms of matter. 'The Science of LIFE' explains principle. Dimensional energy may form 'derivatives' in order to find a solution. A derivative is a subset of the sense computation in the original DE – a subset closer to a solution so 'waste' (from previous computations) is not included. When trying to work out what matter is, the final derivative of a dimensional energy process will be an atom of matter. But – the derivative just before this takes place is exactly like an atom but not in the 'Dimension of Matter'. It is an atom of the 'Dimension of Life'. So is the derivative before this – a copy of an atom of matter but neither in the 'Dimension of Matter' or part of the 'Dimension of Life'. Such derivatives can form variants of a 'Dimension of Life'. Some become 'dimensions'.

Alien life in the 'Dimension of Life' can be said to belong to a Realm of Life. Whether such have any form that we can understand isn't known. Such are a 'consciousness'. Such can detect dimensional energy formed in the human brain that is compact enough to blend into an alien Realm of Life, but genuine communication is almost impossible. When a DE blends with an alien Realm of Life it can create surreal mental imagery. The human brain naturally attempts to decipher any energy across its surface into mental imagery. Except the brain can only do this properly with DE of human origin.

In the image, very close to how such formed in the mind's eye, a human Life in the Spirit dimensional energy has blended with an alien dimensional energy. The 'Woman' image is from human 'Life in the Spirit'. She looks like a human being – albeit this type of mental imagery is not exactly true to life imagery. Note the black figure walking down the steps. Similar to Darth Vader of Star Wars. The steps are 'barriers of physics'. The dark figure is an alien because human beings don't look like that. Not just a simple alien. The relatively easy manner in which he mastered those steps suggests a highly evolved alien. In this case this alien is capable of understanding human senses and the reason his form looks human. Many aliens would not look human, would look strange, even like a yellow duck. Sometimes that is the best the brain can do when trying to equate a sense within dimensional energy to a human understanding.

Sometimes a highly evolved life in the 'Dimension of Life' becomes involved. The DE in the brain of the explorer has compacted so much that it is touching a Realm of Life we cannot imagine. A compaction changes the nature of the physics of the DE in a way that we can't understand such physics, or how complex the DE has become. Consider the mental image. Very close to how it formed in the mind's eye – eventually! (Took about 2 days to focus in a way as to compact the DE in the brain to produce this result). At first the brain of the author translated this alien sense into an image of an alien that looked like a horror or a devil in the mind's eye. The alien sensed the discrepancy, adapted, and eventually a most beautiful female image. But notice she has wings. People don't have wings. The brain that is forming the mental imagery is trying to explain that this is a very complicated sense that it 'sensed' in a DE. The wings suggest a consciousness which is high (super evolved) in the Dimension of Life. This type of alien that can sense an issue in equating a sense to a sense, is considered as an extremely evolved life. Most of the few alien life that 'Life in the Spirit' at times comes across, struggle for years trying to form a simple common interface. That interface can become unusual stories in 'Life in the Spirit' which hint at something alien but are hard to understand. This alien (in the image) did it in a matter of seconds human time. This suggests a DE that is trillions times trillions of times more complicated than a human DE. A celestial Being.

To better understand how the brain forms mental imagery, a process psychiatrists refer to as 'confabulation' needs to be considered. To a lay person it means to speak lies. But when a brain has a dysfunction and can't form a thought properly, it will use anything in memory that can complete the thought – so the person can speak that thought. This appears the same with mental imagery. If the brain can't find a match for parts of a sense in a DE, it may invent anything that can complete the image that forms in the mind's eye.

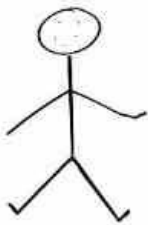

We all know how biological life is born. But, a birth in the Dimension of Life may be different. Any compact DE formed in a human brain, or a chimp or animal, is potentially like a sperm that can fertilize a 'dimension' or an alien Realm of Life. A dense dimensional energy will, in theory, copy all of the consciousness of the individual into itself. (But often it is more than one person who is linked to a DE, so it is like a 'group consciousness'). In regards to that prior image. This super alien is likely to believe or feel, or understand in her way, that she has given birth to two life-forms. Like any proper natural mother, in theory this alien will not let go of looking after her children. In fact, this alien spent about 10 years human time trying to work out what did she interact with? Finally she managed to convey a sense which the brain equated to an image of people on a beach. In theory, the deduction is that she finally understood the life she gave birth to was inside biological life or dependent on a WILL or FAITH (confidence) to be 'alive'. Human life is relatively short. Alien life in the Dimension of Life is unlikely to die in the manner of the flesh. The problem for this alien mother is huge! How to bring up her two children so they can cope with eternal life? (In theory, as deduced from sense data, most alien life fears something similar to death namely a transition into a different Realm of Life. A transition into the 'unknown').

The risks of any human being who learns to form dimensional energy and compacts it to blend with an alien Realm of Life in such a way that he or she is born into it, is in theory insignificant. The discrepancy between human life and alien life is too big a chasm. But, with super aliens (extremely evolved, some might have evolved over a time which is best explained as infinite) that could be a high risk.

'The Science of LIFE' is a compilation of over 30 years of regularly interacting with the 'Dimension of Life'. It contains much that has been discerned or deduced, or speculation, about the Dimension of Life and the rare alien life that managed to interact with a DE that formed from people. Another interesting result, in theory, from the study of DE in the human brain, is that every human organ is a consciousness in its own right. Possibly, understanding dimensional energy may also have medical research applications.

To better understand the 'Dimension of Life' two books are needed. 'The Science of LIFE' and 'The Third Testament'. These are self-published and have to be obtained directly from the publisher. The first explains the physics and neuroscience. That first book also explains conventional physics and theoretical physics in a dedicated chapter. The second book is mainly tales from the 'Dimension of Life'. Stories adapted to a human audience so a person can gain insights into the 'Dimension of Life'. As to why access to the 'Dimension of Life' is only possible through 'Life in the Spirit', the likely explanation has to do with numbers. 'Jewish Life in the Spirit' is the largest with an estimated 3000 able to regularly use this medium. DE's that are similar combine. One mental image in 'Life in the Spirit' could be linked to a 100 individuals. The next largest is 'Islamic Life in the Spirit' with an estimated 40 members. When, in 'Life in the Spirit', the thoughts turn to alien life in the Dimension of Life, perhaps as many as 3000 human brains can form the fragments of DE that combine to form the one super dense DE. It is that dense DE, which can be represented in the brain as a person or say a 'Dark Lord', which can alter DE states in a way that it begins to interact with alien life in the 'Dimension of Life'. Another point to make is that a DE doesn't really exist in the Dimension of Matter which to us is a three dimensional spatial dimension. However, a DE may be bound to matter and can bind to matter. This theorem comes about from a well known incident when an airplane crashed but in such a way, a muddy area. that much of the expensive equipment was intact. That equipment was taken and put in other airplanes – to be eventually removed because many passengers began to complain of strange ghost-like effects. A DE has no understanding of spatial distance. That means terms such as movement or volume or vibration don't have a true meaning. The sense particle theory equates common physics concepts to how sense particles need to behave to produce an equivalent of say a vibration, or motion, or alignment.

This mental image (in the mind's eye) was the first image that suggested an alien Realm of Life worked out the DE that blended with his Realm of Life came from biological life. A sense the alien projected with this image was translated to "Is this what you look like?" It took about ten years, now and then brief interactions, for alien to work this out. The sense sent back was 'Yes'. This is a 'sense' that has to be used and not words or thoughts or mental images. What is a sense of a human being? Humans come in variety of sizes. From newborns to the elderly. An x-ray is also a 'sense' and sees a human being as a skeleton. When forming a sense, all that you know about how a person looks or is in different situations comes together. So this understanding of the alien is considered a super result.

An important point to understand is this. An advanced alien Realm of Life that suspects a DE that interacted with it is from the Dimension of Matter, is likely to isolate that DE and never sense into it. Consider: what is the sense of life on Earth? While there is a positive sense such as perhaps family life, there is also a large negative sense. Wars, greed, poverty, death, Holocaust, history of slavery, of religions. All of this suggests a poorly evolved life, primitive, best left alone. A sense of horror can be too strong in such a DE. Thus an alien that tried to sense where a human DE came from, is not likely to be that evolved – even though such a Realm of Life is likely to be enormously intelligent compared to human intelligence.